

A day at Pako Festa

Pako Festa happens every year. It is a street festival to celebrate all the different cultures in the region

When we arrive we need to park the car. It can be busy and may take some time.

There are people that can help us with directions and information on the day. They are wearing orange shirts and have a tent we can go to

There will also be other people in uniforms that can help, such as paramedics and police officers.

I can also use the map and program online to help give me more information

There are three lots of toilets I can use at the festival. I can read the map to help work out where they are and which ones I am closest too.

At Pako Festa there is usually a lot of people and there can be lots of different noises on the street and through the speakers

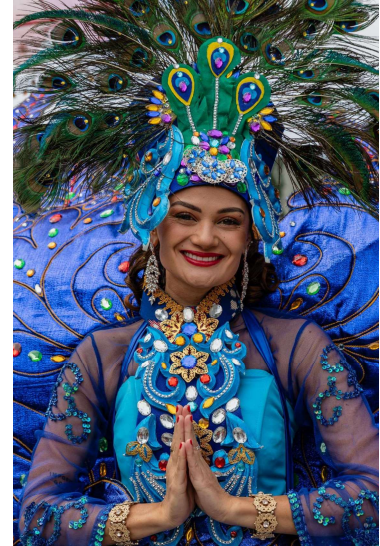

There are also people who commentate the parade for the radio that I may be able to hear through the speakers

There is a parade during the day where cultural groups perform down the street. Some of them have instruments,

Costumes....

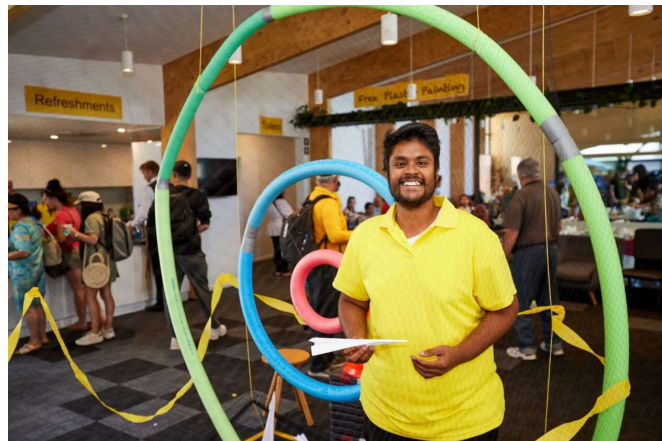

And dancing...

I can see acts at different stages, sometimes they also have music and instruments

I can do activities at the Northern end, including crafts, face painting, sports and more!

There are some 'Chill out' zones where I can sit down and relax or eat if I need. These can be found on the Map

I can find lots of different food stalls with lots of different smells. I may have to wait in line to get what I want

I might also see some animals around enjoying the festival too

If the weather is hot, I can follow the sun safety advice and use the free drinking stations available at West Park and Subway car park

A great day at Pako Festa, now to look forward to next years!
